(1) Special-built booth refers to a booth that is customized and constructed by exhibitors based on their brand image and exhibit characteristics, with the venue providing only the raw floor space.

(2) The maximum height limit for the main structure of a special-built booth is 4.5 meters, and the maximum height limit for suspension points is 6 meters. For any booth marked with a fire exit door on the venue floor plan, an unobstructed exit must be reserved.

(3) In accordance with the municipal fire safety regulations, the construction of two-storey structures within booth areas is strictly prohibited.

(4) The booth number must be displayed in a prominent position (e.g., signboard, backdrop or fascia board), with the font height not less than 15 cm. Example: 13A01.

(5) Booth design should avoid single-panel backdrop structures as far as possible. If such a structure is deemed necessary, the width of the backdrop base in contact with the ground shall not be less than 600 mm. The vertical projection of the structure must not exceed the area of its ground contact, and the center of gravity of the structure must not exceed one-third of its total height.

(6) For the main load-bearing walls of the booth structure, the width of the base in contact with the ground shall not be less than 200 mm to ensure sufficient ground contact area. For large-span walls exceeding 6 meters in length and steel frame structures, cross beams must be installed at the top for connection, and vertical support columns must be installed at the bottom for reinforcement.

(7) The structural support columns shall be made of non-welded steel materials with a diameter of not less than 100 mm. A steel base plate (with a diameter of not less than 800 mm and a thickness of not less than 10 mm) must be welded at the bottom, and a flange plate must be welded at the top to increase the force-bearing area of the columns. The structural columns must run through the entire supported structure and be securely fixed.

(8) For booths constructed with truss structures, all truss connections must use bolts. Every bolt hole must be fitted with a bolt, and the use of iron wire or other substitute materials is strictly prohibited. Diagonal bracing must not be used on the back of the trusses; instead, rectangular frames with a minimum length of 0.5 meters must be used for support, with heavy weights placed on them for stabilization.

(9) For all special-built booths with cross beams installed at the top, detailed structural drawings showing the connection between the cross beams and the main structure must be provided, and the structural strength must meet the load-bearing requirements. The cross beams must be made of steel and firmly connected; the connection between columns and beams must use bolted angle brackets or other safety-certified fixing materials, and lap joints or binding are not allowed.

(10) All decorative materials must be non-combustible or flame-retardant. All construction and decoration materials must comply with the relevant national standards.

(11) In accordance with fire safety regulations, each booth must be equipped with 4-kg portable dry powder fire extinguishers based on its floor area (2 extinguishers for every 50 m², and so on), which shall be placed in a visible and easily accessible location. For booths approved to have a fully enclosed ceiling, 6-kg suspended dry powder fire extinguishers must be installed on the ceiling (1 extinguisher for every 20-30 m², and so on). To ensure the quality and proper use of fire extinguishers, exhibitors shall apply to the official event organizer for the required quantity in a unified manner.

(12) If glass materials are used for booth decoration, tempered glass must be adopted (with a certification of tempered glass and purchase invoice provided). The strength and thickness of the glass must meet the requirements (the thickness of glass used for wall panels shall not be less than 8 mm). The installation method of the glass must be reasonable and reliable; metal frames or professional hardware must be used for glass installation, and elastic padding materials must be placed between the frames/hardware and the glass to ensure safe usage. For large-area glass installations, obvious warning signs must be affixed to prevent injury from glass breakage. If a glass platform is used, the structural support columns and walls must be fixed underneath the platform, and it is forbidden to erect booth structures directly on the smooth glass surface.

(13) No damage, contamination or alteration (e.g., drilling, nailing, screwing, painting, etc.) shall be inflicted on the venue's main building and its supporting facilities. All booth construction and exhibit placement must be completed within the specified booth area. No leaning, pressing, pulling or hanging on the venue's walls, ceilings or various dedicated facilities and equipment is allowed. The suspension of structural load-bearing objects inside the exhibition hall is prohibited.

BOOTH STRUCTURE AND CUSTOM-BUILT BOOTH REGULATIONS

(14) During the construction of ground booths in the exhibition hall, driving nails, piling, or any other ground-fixing methods are strictly prohibited on the hall floor. Decorative materials that are difficult to remove, such as grease, paint, and adhesives, shall not be used.

(15) Booth design must comply with the venue's technical parameters, including height limits and load-bearing capacity. Under no circumstances shall the booth structure or exhibits exceed the specified height, so as to ensure the normal operation of venue facilities and meet security and fire safety requirements.

(16) Without the written approval of the venue management, balloons are prohibited from being brought into the hall or used on the premises.

(17) The construction contractor must carry out construction in strict accordance with the approved drawings, must not operate beyond the scope specified in the construction permit, and shall accept on-site supervision and inspection. In case of non-compliant construction, the event management may issue a verbal warning or even revoke the construction permit. The contractor shall be liable for all consequences arising therefrom.

(18) Any part of the booth structure that exceeds 2.5 meters in height and faces an adjacent booth or aisle must be fully covered with a single type of clean, white material. Exposed structural components are not permitted.

(19) The construction contractor must purchase the insurance coverage specified by the event organizer to provide protection against on-site accidents and personal safety incidents.

(20) All special-built booth design drawings shall first undergo a preliminary review by the official general contractor, then be submitted to the venue management and the municipal fire department for approval. Construction may only commence after approval is obtained. For unapproved drawings, the design scheme must be revised until approval is granted. No unauthorized modifications are allowed to any approved drawings; if modifications are indeed necessary, a new scheme must be submitted to the official general contractor (venue management and event organizer) for approval before implementation. The event organizer reserves the right to refuse the entry and setup of any special-built booth with unapproved or unsubmitted drawings, and impose penalties on parties that make unauthorized modifications.
